Menstrual Hygiene Awareness

Keep the menstrual hygiene right, to make your future bright

The theme of Menstrual Hygiene Day 2023 is: making menstruation a normal fact of life by 2030.

Many young girls struggle with managing their menstruation days some educational institutions lack proper sanitation facilities and access to sanitary pads. This leads them to miss college several days every month, causing them to fall behind in their studies. The importance of menstrual hygiene for girls in colleges cannot be overstated. It is crucial to ensure that girls succeed and achieve their dreams.

Importance of Menstrual Hygiene

"Every girl has the right to manage her menstruation safely and with dignity. When girls are forced to stay home due to a lack of menstrual hygiene products or facilities, their education is disrupted, and their potential is limited. By investing in menstrual hygiene management, we can unlock girls' potential and accelerate progress towards gender equality."

Menstrual hygiene is crucial for the health, dignity, and well-being of girls and women. Poor menstrual hygiene practices can lead to a range of health issues, including infections, rashes, and other long-term complications.

In addition to physical health risks, the lack of access to menstrual hygiene facilities can also affect girls' education and social participation. Girls not having access to sanitary pads or private toilets may miss college during their periods or drop out altogether. This can have long-term consequences on their education and economic opportunities.

Role of Colleges in Menstrual Health and Hygiene

Colleges play a crucial role in promoting menstrual health and hygiene among girls. Menstruation is a natural process that affects half of the world's population, but there is still little awareness about it.

Colleges can help break down the knowledge barriers by providing comprehensive menstrual education. Education that covers topics such as the menstrual cycle, hygiene practices, and menstrual product options. This can help girls understand their bodies better and promote better hygiene practices, such as using sanitary pads in India, which can reduce the risk of infections and other health complications.

Health:

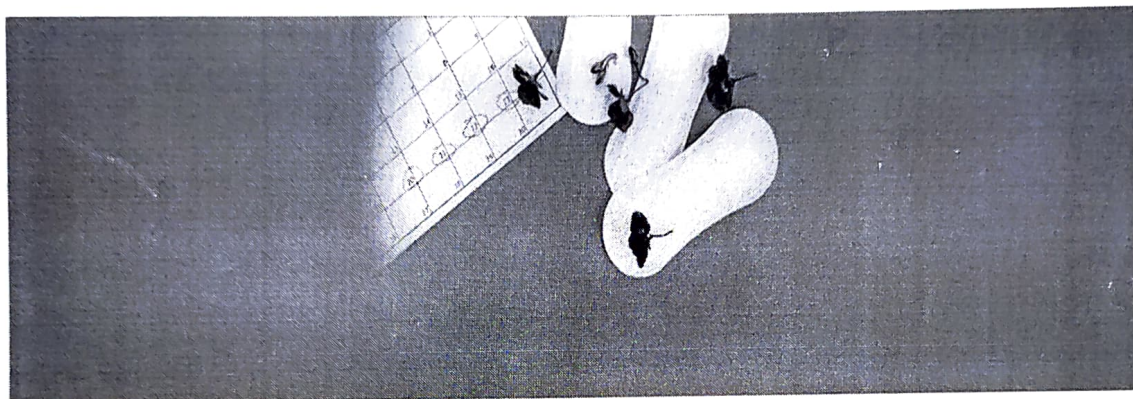

When girls and women have access to safe and affordable sanitary materials to manage their menstruation, they decrease their risk of infections. This can have cascading effects on overall sexual and reproductive health, including reducing teen pregnancy, maternal outcomes, and fertility. Poor menstrual hygiene, however, can pose serious health risks, like reproductive and urinary tract infections which can result in future infertility and birth complications. Neglecting to wash hands after changing menstrual products can spread infections, such as hepatitis B and thrush.

- Studies have found that giving out sanitary pads to girls leads to a significant reduction in sexually transmitted infections and bacterial vaginosis.
- The lack of means for hygienic management of menstruation can cause discomfort and psychological stress and adds to the shame and sometimes depression that women and girls experience because of menstruation-related taboos and stigma.

Why is it important to maintain menstrual hygiene?

The onset of menstruation is one of the most important physiological changes occurring in girls during the adolescent years. Menstruation heralds the onset of physiological maturity in girls. It becomes the part and parcel of their lives until menopause. Apart from personal importance, this phenomenon also has social significance.

Menstrual hygiene is a hygienic practice during menstruation which can prevent women from the infection in reproductive and urinary tract. In India, menstruation is surrounded by myths and misconceptions with a long list of “do’s” and “don’ts” for women. Menstruation and menstrual practices are still clouded by taboos and socio – cultural restrictions resulting in adolescent girls lacking knowledge and remaining ignorant of the scientific facts and hygienic health practices, which sometimes results into adverse health outcomes.

Hygiene-related practices of women during menstruation are of considerable importance, as it may increase vulnerability to Reproductive Tract Infections (RTI’s). Poor menstrual hygiene is one of the major reasons for the high prevalence of RTIs in the country and contributes significantly to female morbidity. Lack of knowledge regarding menstruation and menstrual hygiene lead to poor attitude and practice. There are various issues like awareness, availability and quality of napkins, regular supply, privacy, and water supply, disposal of napkins, reproductive health education and family support which needs simultaneous attention for promotion of menstruated hygiene.

L.V.D. College, RAICHUR-03.

Common repercussions of unhealthy menstrual practices

- Irritation of the skin causes discomfort and can possibly result in dermatitis – a medical condition in which the skin swells, turns red, and at times becomes sore with blisters.
- Introduction of bacteria into the urethra may cause urinary tract infections (UTIs). It can happen anywhere in the urinary tract and can be fatal as it can even damage the kidneys if left untreated.
- Alteration of the pH of vaginal flora can happen. This can lead to change in environment and increased tendency to get bacterial vaginosis. It impacts the maximum when the women are trying to get pregnant.

Frequent episodes of such infections can lead to future consequences like difficulty in conceiving, increased risk of abortions and preterm delivery. Hence, not maintaining proper menstrual hygiene can affect entire reproductive career of woman.

Follow these healthy practices

1. Change frequently – Changing sanitary napkins or tampons within every 4-6 hours is the cardinal rule to establish vaginal hygiene. Menstrual blood, when released from the body attracts various organisms from our bodies, which multiply in the warmth of the blood, and cause irritation, rashes or urinary tract infections. Changing your sanitary napkin or tampon regularly curbs the growth of these organisms and prevents infections.
2. Wash yourself properly – Washing your vagina regularly is extremely important, because the organisms cling to your body after you have removed your sanitary napkin. Most people wash themselves regularly, but not the right way—which is, using your hands in motion from the vagina to the anus, not vice-versa.
3. Don't use soaps or vaginal hygiene products – While using vaginal hygiene products every day is a good idea, avoid overusing them. Vaginas have their own cleaning mechanism which comes into play during menstrual cycles, and these artificial hygiene products can hamper the natural process leading to infections and growth of bacteria.
4. Discard the sanitary napkin properly – Disposing off your tampons and sanitary napkins properly is an important step. Wrap them properly before you throw them away, so the bacteria and infections do not spread. Make sure you don't flush them, since that will block the toilet causing the water to back up, spreading the bacteria all over it. Washing your hands properly is of utmost importance after you have wrapped and discarded the used tampons and sanitary napkins, since you're likely to touch the stained area while wrapping them
5. Stick to one method of sanitation – Using multiple methods can sometimes gives false sense of low menstrual blood loss and prolonged usage of items, leading to increased chances of infection after prolonged contact.

Report on Workshop of the Reality of Anemia

Introduction:

On 12/01/23, a workshop on anemia was conducted in our college to create awareness on the problems and consequences young women and girls of age group 14-48 phase due to this growing disorder.

Program Details:

The program was honored by the presence of chief guest Dr. Neha Sukhani (Associate professor, RIMS) and Dr. Ashwini (MD, MIMS Mandya). The dignitaries talked about the symptoms that reappear in women if they are anemic and have blood levels less than 12mg/dL. They also conducted a small play that showed the adverse symptoms a young girl can face if the disease is untreated and not diagnosed prior to treatment.

Later, a small demo on how to check the hemoglobin levels was conducted by the department of zoology. Here, students belonging to various year and the mothers of these students were invited to test their Hb levels in their blood. This significantly helped the people to not just know their Hb levels but also identify the symptoms they faced in their routine life.

Conclusion:

The programme was a huge success and was well appreciated by the dignitaries and the principle of our LVD College. Dr. Neha mam thanked department of Microbiology for conducting such an interesting workshop.
